The Old Love.
I met her; she was thin and old;
She stopped, and laid with twining feet.
The hair was gray, that once was gold;
The voice was harsh, that once was sweet.
Her eyes were dim, her heart was sore,
Borked of the gout, and gouty joy,
Were dim; I felt a sad surprise,
That I had loved her when a boy.

But yet a something in her air
Restored me to the vanished time,
My heart grew young and seemed to wear
The brightness of my youthful prime.
I took her withered hand in mine,
Touched her cheek, recalled a ghost of joy—
I lit her with a reverent sigh,
For I had loved her when a boy.

The Baby.

Another little wren
Upon the sea of life;
Another soul to save,
Amidst the hell and strife.

Two more little feet
To walk the dusty road;
To choose where swallows meet,
The narrow and the broad.

Two more little hands
To work for good or ill;
Two more little eyes;
Another little will.

Another heart to love,
Receiving love again;
And so the baby came,
A thing of joy and pain.

A NEW Story of Napoleon at Milan.

A correspondent of the Newport (R. I.) News tells the following anecdote of Napoleon the first:

"Among my old French acquaintances here, many years since, was old Savan, M. Cilli, personally attached to Napoleon's corps scientifique. He accompanied him into Egypt, and was one of the whom whom orders formed in the centre. I have never seen so passionate an admirer of the Emperor. Among the many incidents he recounted of Napoleon, shall I not done one for you? At the time Napoleon was general of the army of Italy, he was very square and youthful-looking. While laying siege to Milan, and confident of its surrender, he quartered himself at the palace of an aristocratic Italian lady, who was bitter in her hostility and sarcastic in deriding the youth and inexperience of the young General. At dinner she said to him, in presence of his staff, with malicious emphasis, 'Quel avez vous Monsieur le General?' 'Aujourd'hui, Madame, j'ai vaincu les mains dans ma patrie.' And true to his boast, the next day he entered the city."

The Massachusetts Amendment.

The following amendment has been adopted to the State Constitution of Massachusetts:

"No person of foreign birth will be entitled to vote, or shall be eligible to office, unless he shall have resided within the jurisdiction of the United States for two years subsequent to his naturalization, and shall be otherwise qualified according to the constitution, &c. &c. To one or more provisions which this amendment shall not affect the rights which any person of foreign birth possessed at the time of adoption thereof, and provided further, that it shall not affect the rights of any child of a citizen of the United States born during the temporary absence of the parent therefrom."

THE abolition leaders, and their organs in the public press, are most violent in their denunciations of the action of the State courts of Ohio in refusing to enter into a conflict with the United States authorities in the case of the Oberlin rescuers, by rejecting the application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of prisoners held by the federal officials.

We can easily comprehend the rage of the irrepressible-conflict doctriiners at this crushing defeat of one of their most cherished objects, and we were not unprepared for their bitter disappointment at finding that the stealing and rescuing of negroes in direct violation of law is a pastime in which they cannot indulge without the danger of summary punishment.

The action of the State courts of Ohio was the honest and faithful discharge of a solemn duty, and by their fearless and conscientious adherence to their official obligations they have availed a country between New York and federal authorities which would have lost all their manumission consequences. They have followed the wise and difficult course given by our respected Chief Magistrate to one of his officials in a similar case a little more than a year ago. "The your duty maintain the constitution and the law," and by so doing they have inspired the entire country with additional confidence in the integrity, independence, and right impartiality of the judiciary, and proved that there is a firm and solid breakwater to beat back the waves of heated party fanaticism and sectional prejudices.—Washington Constitution.

ARREST OF A GANG OF ROBBERS.—For some three or four years past numerous depredations and robberies have been committed along Caprice creek, below Wheeling, and in different parts of Cabell and Monroe counties, Ohio. A short time since a gentleman living upon the creek was a passenger when he recognized, carrying a trunk through the woods in a suspicious manner, and going to a magistrate after consultation with friends, had the party arrested. A trial took place before a magistrate, when one of the men turned State evidence, exposing the whole business, and telling of a regularly organized gang of thieves in the neighborhood. He described the spot where the proceeds of the robbery were kept in a cave in the woods.—WILLIAM B. WOODS, Speaker of the House of Representatives, MARTIN WELKER, President of the Senate.
